Long Bio: Kathy Kulig is the New York Times & USA Today Bestselling author of erotic romance whose works include paranormal, contemporary, BDSM and suspense. She has published nearly 20 novels, novellas and short stories, including RED TAPE, part of the bestselling SPICE BOX anthology. Critics have described her writing as "very raw and hot", "wonderfully unique" and "entertaining and captivating". She's won or placed in a number of writing contests including the PRISM and the EPIC Awards. Her interest in mythology, quantum physics and the supernatural, and also her extensive background in science provide inexhaustible material for new projects realms. Expect a dark and erotically-charged read with lots of romance.

Kathy has been listed on Amazon as on the "Most Popular Authors in Paranormal Romance" & also on the most popular Contemporary Romance list.

A member of Romance Writers of America, Kathy was past president of her local chapter for Pocono Lehigh Romance Writers. She's also a member of Liberty States Fiction Writers and other local writers groups. She teaches workshops on various writing related topics at conferences, writers groups and online.

She's published in both fiction and non-fiction. More than three dozen of her articles have appeared in magazines, newspapers and various on-line venues. Besides her career in writing, she has worked as a cytotechnologist, research scientist, dive master and stringer for a newspaper. When she's not writing or dreaming up her next steamy story, she enjoys traveling, relaxing by the beach with a book, mountain biking, movies and dinners out.

Kathy was raised in a small town in northern New Jersey, and also lived in upstate New York, Colorado, and southern Florida. She now resides in eastern Pennsylvania with her husband and lives in a 100-year-old Victorian home, which has a garage built of rejected tombstones.
